Materiality has to be determined on a case-by-case basis depending on specific facts and circumstances relating to the information or event. In order to determine whether a particular event or information is Material in nature, the Board will consider the “quantitative” or “qualitative” criteria mentioned below.

Quantitative criteria:

Where the event or information is likely to cause prices of the Company’s securities to fluctuate, as a result of such event or information, by 10% or more, such that persons who commonly invest in securities may be influenced in deciding whether to acquire or dispose of the Company’s securities;

Where the event or information pertains to a matter which may have an impact on the Company’s net worth, as a result of the event or information, to be affected by 10% or more;

Where the event or information pertains to a matter which may cause the Company's turnover to move, as a result of the event or information, by 10% or more;

Where the event or information pertains to a matter which may cause the assets of the Company, amounting to 10% or more of such assets, to be deployed into an avenue other than the one where they are currently deployed.

The above threshold will be determined on the basis of audited financial statements of the Company for the last audited financial year.

Qualitative criteria

The omission of an event or information, which is likely to result in discontinuity or alteration of event or information already available publicly.

The omission of an event or information is likely to result in significant market reaction if the said omission came to light at a later date.

In addition to the above, an event or information may be treated as being Material if in the opinion of the Board, the event or information is considered Material.
